Female muggers strike again?

Police are investigating a pair of recent robberies where the description of the two female muggers and their vicious tactics are very similar.

Late Thursday night, in the posh south-side Riverbend neighbourhood, a female pedestrian was approached by suspects matching the description of the two women.

The woman was walking home on Riverbend Road near 52 Avenue when she was attacked, held down, punched and kicked. The muggers stole her wallet and $500 cash. They fled on foot.

The first suspect is described as an aboriginal woman around 25 years old, 5-foot-4, with a thin build and long, dark hair. The second woman is described as Caucasian, around the same age and height, overweight, with long black hair.

Earlier Thursday, a 29-year-old woman was viciously attacked outside a downtown convenience store near 104 Street and 107 Avenue. Shortly after 9:30 a.m. Thursday, the victim was walking through the parking lot of the store when she was approached by two women who demanded cash. They knocked her to the ground, punched and kicked her, and slashed her on the hand with a knife. The muggers fled on foot. They were described as a thin aboriginal woman and an overweight Caucasian woman, both in their 20s.

Price of gas on fire

No relief in sight as expert predicts $1.50 per litre for summer

By JEFF CUMMINGS
Metro Edmonton

Gasoline prices in Edmonton reached record levels this weekend, and experts see them headed only one way from the current level of about $1.30 per litre: Up, up, up.

Prices of 1.45 to 1.50 per litre in the weeks ahead are expected thanks to crude oil prices, which have surged close to $135 per barrel.

where to score a deal

» Looking for some deals at the pumps? With most prices hovering around $1.28 per litre, there are a few stations in and around Edmonton offering cheap gas, according to www.edmontongasprices.com:
» Two 7-Elevens (5004 162 Ave. and 2 Sioux Rd. in Sherwood Park) 120.4 for regular fuel as of yesterday, along with a Husky gas station at 15303 73A St.).

» Those who live in the city can find deals out of town, including the Mo-hawk gas station on 50 Street in Beaumont, where gas was reported to be $1.24 per litre Saturday night.
» The Mac's at Ellerslie Road and Parsons Road is offering $1.254 per litre for regular fuel as of yesterday.

METRO EDMONTON

rel, says Catherine Hay, a senior adviser with MJ Ervin & Associates, a company that tracks gas prices.

"It's not likely to stay at that level, but it's certainly conceivable that it could spike up that high in the next coming weeks," she said.

"It could happen before the long weekend. It depends on when refineries switch from winter production to summer gasoline production."

Most pump prices have hovered around $1.28 a litre in Edmonton since Friday, but with the large jump in crude oil prices, along with the normal summer demand for fuel, Hay predicts to see a 10 to 15 per cent rise.

The Bank of Nova Scotia suggested last week that Canadians should get used to the record-high oil prices as it predicted the trend will be around for the next 10 years.

The bank predicts the price of crude will reach $140 a barrel later this year, hovering around that mark in 2009.

Community rallies around autistic child's treasure

By VICTORIA HANDYSIDES
Metro Edmonton

Already coping with the daily challenges of caring for an autistic child, Shannon Koreman never thought she'd have to explain to her 13-year-old foster son that he'd been the victim of a thoughtless crime, and that she has no idea why.

On Thursday night, Koreman discovered that her son's special-needs bicycle had been stolen out of her backyard, though she and her husband covered the bike with a tarp and jammed it between a fence and vehicle to make sure it would never be the target of thieves.

"I have no idea why someone would do this. Maybe they needed it, or didn't even know it was a special-needs bike," she said.

Since then, Koreman has been on a marathon search throughout the Westmount area for her son's bike, as the theft has taken away a large part of his independence.

"It really allowed him to be one of the guys out there," Koreman said. "It allowed us to go on bike rides, which is one of the only activities we can do as a family."

Shannon Koreman displays the poster she put up in her neighbourhood after thieves stole a specialized bicycle for her autistic foster child.

Koreman said the family rides every weekend and that since her son's bike has been stolen, she's been bearing the emotional brunt of the theft, as well as searching for it tirelessly.

"Over the years, I've taken over the emotions that would he not have been autistic, he would have felt," she said. "Because he doesn't really feel things the same way, I found that I'm feeling them for him. I just walked in the rain crying, looking for his bike."

The bike was donated to the family five years ago by the Children's Ability Fund. Koreman calculated that it would take the family about one year to save the $1,000 that would be needed to replace it.

"Like anybody else, it's really hard to save money," she said.

Since hearing about the incident in the media, workers from Midwest Constructors have raised the money among employees to replace the bike.

Though the money has been donated, Koreman says that she'll continue to search for the bike, and if it's found, she'll donate the money back to charity.

"I'm just so angry at all the bad people out there, but I know that there are 20 good guys right there."

motorcycles.

Val Figliuzzi, executive director with the Kids with Cancer Society, said that the interaction the families get with each other during meetings like this goes a long way to help the healing process of everyone.

"It's an opportunity for families to meet one another," she said. "They're going through the same thing with their child."

Tristan Sware, 9, one of the children at the event, got to ride with Dan McQuat and said that while he didn't get to experience a wheelie, he was happy with the experience, and even said a few nice words about his driver.

"He was nice," said Sware. "[It] was fun [and] fast."

The Look and Stepper Home Revving Up For Kids ride leaves Edmonton June 19 and arrives in Whitefish, Montana on June 22.

Mountie in collision set to make full recovery: RCMP

By JEFF CUMMINGS
Metro Edmonton

A Mountie who was airlifted to an Edmonton hospital after his patrol car was flipped and crushed from a collision in Spruce Grove Saturday could be back on the job before long, says an RCMP spokesman.

"He was pretty banged up, but I can say he is expected to make a full recovery," said Cpl. Wayne Oakes yesterday.

Spruce Grove and Stony Plain RCMP say the police cruiser was heading east-bound on Highway 16A to a domestic dispute when it struck a dark grey Ford F-

150 pickup truck shortly before 8:30 a.m. at Century Road

The truck was attempting to turn left onto the highway as it was heading south on Century Road when it was struck before both vehicles ended up in the ditch, say Mounties.

The man in the pickup was treated for minor injuries on scene, while the officer, who is in his 30s, was airlifted to an Edmonton hospital.

Mounties say no charges have been laid in relation to the crash as their investigation continues.

Immigration vote looms

Tory plan to ease applicant backlog still under fire

It's the nearly one million cases caught in Canada's huge immigration backlog, that has prompted Immigration Minister Diane Finley to call for "urgent action" to modernize a dysfunctional system.

The government's proposed changes to the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act are to be voted on in the coming weeks. No one disputes the long waits are unacceptable. But a growing number of immigration experts and community groups say Finley's proposal will not reduce the backlog and will, in fact, lengthen the wait because the amendments only apply to new applications filed after Feb. 26.

funds

» The Tories have pledged $109 million over five years to bring the backlog down.

If passed, the legislative changes would give Finley the power to reject applications even if they meet all the criteria and instruct officials to cherry-pick immigrants based on labour market needs. The government has embedded the controversial changes in the budget bill, turning the immigration plan into a confidence vote — a move the Grits were ill-prepared for.

G8 eyes climate pact

The Group of Eight rich nations will likely agree to an "aspirational" target for cutting greenhouse gas emissions by 2050 but shun mid-term goals at a July summit, the top UN climate official said yesterday.

Ministers and representatives from the G8 and major emerging countries gathered this weekend in Japan to try to build momentum for UN-led climate change talks, but remained at odds over who should do what when.

G8 leaders agreed last year to consider seriously a goal to halve global emissions by 2050, a proposal favoured by Germany, France, Britain, Italy, Japan and Canada. But with wide gaps within the G8 on how to share the burden for fighting climate change that goal is unlikely to be met.

Phoenix touches down

NASA probe to assess Mars' ability to sustain life

A small science probe blazed through the salmon-coloured skies of Mars yesterday, touching down on a frozen desert at the planet's north pole to search for water and assess conditions for sustaining life, NASA officials said.

The spacecraft, known as Phoenix, landed at 7:53 p.m. after a do-or-die plunge through the planet's thin atmosphere and thruster-jet landing to the Mars surface. It marked the first time a spacecraft had successfully landed at one of the planet's polar regions.

"It was a hell of a lot scarier than the two Mars rovers," NASA's space sciences chief Ed Weiler said, referring to the cushioned landings of the Spirit and Opportunity rovers.

Pulled by Mars' gravity, Phoenix was tearing along at 12,700 mph before it entered the atmosphere, which slowed the craft so it could pop out a parachute and fire thruster rockets to gently float to the ground.

Scientists found in 2002 that Mars' polar regions have vast reservoirs of water frozen beneath a shallow layer of soil. Phoenix was launched Aug. 4, 2007, to sample the water and determine if the right ingredients for life are present.

Aftershock rocks recovering China

At least six killed in 5.8 tremor

A strong aftershock jolted southwest China yesterday killing at least six people and injuring nearly 1,000 others, state media said, nearly a fortnight after a big earthquake killed tens of thousands in the same area.

More than 70,000 houses were toppled during Sunday's tremor in Qingchuan, Sichuan province, state television reported. The 5.8-magnitude aftershock was epicentred 40 kilometres west-northwest of Guangyuan, the U.S. Geological Survey said.

Almost all of Qingchuan's houses had been declared unsafe after a devastating earthquake on May 12, and residents had moved into tents on the fringes of town.

» China planned to dynamite rock, mud and rubble forming a dangerously large "quake lake" today.
 » Chinese soldiers carrying 10 kg of dynamite each arrived at the Tangjia-shan lake, one of dozens formed by the earthquake, to try to blast away rubble, Xinhua news agency said.

A mountain slope abutting the town had shown a crack, leading to fears it could smother part of the city in a landslide.

Premier Wen Jiabao, who believes the overall death toll from the May 12 quake could exceed 80,000, has said the main concerns are secondary disasters like flooding and landslides, epidemics, and providing shelter for the 5 million displaced.

Learn What the Rich Already Know About Money at Our FREE LOCAL EVENT RICH DAD POOR DAD

My Poor Dad was educated and intelligent.

He completed four years of undergraduate work in less than two years. He then went on to receive his Ph.D... all on full financial scholarships.

My Rich Dad never finished the eighth grade.

Both men were successful in their careers, working hard all their lives. Both earned substantial incomes.

Yet my highly educated dad struggled financially all his life and the other dad would become one of the richest men I had ever known.

One died leaving tens of millions of dollars to his family, charities, and his church. The other left a legacy of unpaid bills. Both men were strong, charismatic, and influential.

Both men offered me advice, but they did not advise the same things.

My two dads offered me the perspective of contrasting points of view: a rich man's view and a poor man's view.

This forced me to think about, and ultimately choose, a new way of thinking for myself. A way of thinking that assures financial security and prosperity! Now, through my books and workshops, I can share my mindset with anyone interested in mastering the Rich Dad® way of thinking – and use it to create true long-term wealth.

Saudi Aramco to invest $129B

5-year plan nearly $40B higher than previous estimates

State oil giant Saudi Aramco plans to invest $129 billion US on new energy projects in the next five years, the company's executive vice president of operations said yesterday.

Saudi Arabia is the world's largest oil exporter and Aramco is expanding to increase crude, gas, refining and petrochemical capacity.

About $70 billion US of the total would be spent by international and domestic joint ventures, and the remaining $59 billion US on projects solely undertaken by Aramco, Khalid al-Falih said.

The $129 billion US figure is nearly $40 billion US higher than previous given expansion estimates and includes more projects, such as refinery plans in the United States and China, a second phase of the Saudi-based PetroRabigh, and a giant petrochemical plant at Ras Tanura to be built by Dow Chemical.

The Buch stops with Oil

The Former Captain's Club that is the Edmonton Oilers front office and coaching staff will grow by one when the Oilers make official the promotion of Kelly Buchberger to the coaching staff in coming days.

After one season as head coach of Edmonton's AHL affiliate in Springfield, Buchberger, who captained the Oilers from 1995-99, will be named as an assistant on Craig MacTavish's staff.

That'll make it three former Oilers who've had the "C" stitched on their jersey running the show now. GM Kevin Lowe was captain 1991-92 and MacTavish wore the letter 1992-94.

It's a move that's been in the cards since Buchberger signed a two-year contract and took the head coaching job in Springfield at the beginning of this season after Geoff Ward signed with the Boston Bruins.

Buchberger, 41, who spent the 2004-05 campaign as an assistant coach under Ward with the Edmonton Roadrunners of the AHL and another year as a developmental coach in the organization, joins Charlie Huddy and Bill Moores on MacTavish's staff.

Under Buchberger, Springfield missed the Calder Cup playoffs with a record of 35-35-5. With Buchberger being promoted, the Oilers are expected to announce that assistant Jeff Truitt will take over as head coach.

While MacTavish hasn't confirmed the hiring of Buchberger, it's a formality that could be dispensed with before the team opens its prospects camp in Sherwood Park Sunday.

Near-perfect Dixon roars to Indy victory

Patrick in spotlight after crashing out

Scott Dixon of New Zealand held on from pole to win the Indianapolis 500 yesterday, while Danica Patrick was knocked out of the race in a pit lane crash.

After stealing the spotlight in the buildup to the race, Patrick overshadowed the New Zealander's victory when she was taken out by Australian Ryan Briscoe during the final fuel stop.

While Dixon was speeding towards victory, the crowd stood and watched as an incensed Patrick climbed out of her car to confront Briscoe before being intercepted by track officials.

Dixon

"It's probably best I didn't get there isn't it," said Patrick, who became the first woman to win an IndyCar race with her victory in Japan last month.

While many in the crowd of over 300,000 came to the Brickyard hoping to watch Patrick make 500 history, she would have needed something spectacular over the final laps to overtake Dixon, who ran a near-faultless race.

Vacation deprived?

Almost 30% of Canadians aren't taking time off

By RAFAEL BRUSILOV
for Metro Edmonton

Feeling vacation-deprived? Join the club — a new Ipsos-Reid survey shows 29 per cent of Canadians do not take all their vacation days every year and 33 per cent agreed they feel vacation-deprived at work.

The survey, in its sixth year and released by online travel portal Expedia.ca, found that lack of time, too much work, restrictive and unsupportive vacation policies at work and workload guilt from bosses and co-workers all contributed to fewer people taking vacation days. Only 21 per cent of Canadians missed taking all their vacation days in the same study last year.

"People have a hard time taking a vacation when they're too busy to get away," said Beverly Beuermann-King, a stress and wellness expert from Toronto involved with the study.

Beuermann-King says in her experience, people who don't take vacations often think they are being more productive but in fact show much higher rates of absenteeism, drug use and disability claims than people who take a regular break.

"Not taking a vacation is a symptom of not having that work-life balance. If you don't have time to take your vacation, then what else do you have time for?" she said.

For most people, a few days of fun and relaxation can make a big difference, but others may need to put their foot down and commit to some real time off.

"If you haven't had a vacation in five years, a long weekend probably isn't going to make you feel rejuvenated," Beuermann-King said.

Getting into "vacation mode" can take a few days, so Beuermann-King says to plan for a one- to two-week vacation if you need a longer break. Knowing yourself is also key to choosing the right vacation: People in repetitive jobs often find joy in doing something tense and adventurous, whereas people in stressful jobs tend to prefer something relaxing like lying on a beach, being served and not having to think about much of anything.

Sean Shannon, managing director of Expedia.ca, says even though the study is in its sixth year, he still finds the results a bit shocking.

"It always astounds me that there are hard-working Canadians who don't use their vacation days," he said.

E-mails and duties can pile up upon return, so Beuermann-King recommends a little trick: Tell people you're coming back one day later than you actually are — this will leave you with one whole day to catch up.

Choosing the right vacation is important as people in repetitive jobs often find joy in adventure, while people in stressful jobs tend to prefer something relaxing.

«Not taking a vacation is a symptom of not having that work-life balance. If you don't have time to take your vacation, then what else do you have time for?»

Workers cling to their job

Employees now expected to check e-mail at the beach

As workers prepare to enjoy the start of the summer vacation season, for some, it won't mean being free of the office. A quarter of workers, up from 20 per cent in 2007, said they plan to stay in contact with work while on vacation, and close to one in 10 (nine per cent) said their bosses expect them to be working or at least checking e-mail while on vacation, according to the CareerBuilder.com annual vacation survey.

Fifteen per cent of workers said they gave up vacation days in 2007 because they didn't have time to use them, with nine per cent giving up four or more days.

Comparing industries, sales workers (50 per cent) lead in the number of workers planning to check in while away on vacation, followed by 37 per cent of both financial services workers and IT workers.

When planning a vacation, Rosemary Haefner, vice-president of human resources at CareerBuilder.com, recommends the following tips to make your time off a true break from the office:

» 1. Prepare. Prepare. Prepare. Make sure everyone on your team knows what days you plan to be out of the office as far in advance as possible.

» 2. Think big. If you know that you will be taking a big vacation this year and expect a big project to appear at around the same time, do everything possible to leave as much room between the two events. Projects sometimes run longer than projected, so plan so both don't become stressful.

» 3. Stick to a plan. In most cases you are going to be away with other people. If you have to work, schedule a (short) block of time each day to check in and take care of any important business. Sticking to this plan will allow you the piece of mind of knowing things are fine at the office.

» 4. Teach by example. If you are the boss, take a vacation and limit your contact with the office. Workers will feel much better getting away and enjoying themselves if the boss is doing the same.

New surveys have suggested, with today's more connected world, that not only are more people planning to work while on vacation, their bosses are now expecting them to be checking e-mail or their voicemail.

Coping through the grapevine

Viticulturist gains strength while managing fields

By RAFAEL BRUSILOW

Paula Moulton's world shattered in 2003, when her husband of 19 years, Chuck, was killed in a car accident.

Instead of falling into despair, however, Moulton decided to support her three kids and honour her husband's memory by forging ahead with her dreams.

The tragedy happened just three days before Moulton's first book — a collection of personal wisdom titled Seasons Among The Vines: Life Lessons From The California Wine Country — was about to be published.

Her husband had been an orthopaedic surgeon serving thousands of clients and teamed with Moulton's knowledge of grapes (she has a degree in viticulture as well as a writing degree) they had owned two dozen acres of grapevines near San Francisco, selling grapes to several wineries in California's famous Sonoma wine region.

Overnight, Moulton had to take the financial reins — she sold all 24 acres of grapevines and began running the orthopaedic prac-

"I was mourning as I was going through it. It was like stepping into someone's shoes overnight. There was of course a lot of change, a lot of pain," Moulton said.

She said fear of letting her kids down motivated her.

"I thought, 'I have to teach them to move on, to have a life.' Whenever I felt, 'I can't do this,' I thought about my kids."

She said she hardly remembers the first six months after the accident, relying on accounts her kids and friends gave her about that time.

"I think it was part of my coping mechanism," she said.

Moulton, now 48, runs her own winery in Sonoma, which she and her kids named Midnight Moulton, her deceased husband's nickname.

She remarried a year ago and has a second book on the way, aimed at helping people who have lost something — be it a job, or a spouse. She hopes people can learn from her experiences that life is uncertain and the best you can do is make the choice to move on.

"You do have the power to make decisions in your life. You don't have the power to change the past, or even what might happen to you today, but if you can just pull the positive things out of an experience, you can move on with your life. Take small steps. You don't have to take huge leaps," Moulton said.

Idol champ keeps his cool

Despite criticism, David Cook never lost confidence

By SANDY CAETANO
for Metro Edmonton

Before being crowned the new king of American Idol, David Cook had many hurdles to jump over including criticisms from the judges.

When you're in a singing competition of this magnitude, competitors have to deal with the stress of learning new songs each week in addition to critics nitpicking song choices, vocal talents and outfits.

Judge Simon Cowell was one of Cook's toughest critics. He put Cook's performances down numerous times and even called him cocky and pompous. However, Cook says he never let it get to him or change who he was.

"I went into this with kind of a different perspective from everybody else. I didn't have any expectations as to what the show was going to do for me or what I was going to do for the show," says Cook. "I just went into

(it) as an opportunity to expose myself musically to a large audience. So my confidence level really never wavered and maybe that's what got misinterpreted as cocky or arrogant."

From day one, Cook understood the brevity of the situation but chose not to get wrapped up in it. For him the focus was on enjoying the experience.

Cook's first album coming out of the Idol gate is going to feature a mixture of his own work as well as contributions from others. His priority is to release a solid and successful record.

"The ideal release date is as soon as possible if you're asking me, but obviously these things take time," says the 25-year-old former bartender from Blue Springs, Mo. "As far as the type of record, it'll probably be a rock record, but I think that's a pretty vague generalization. I just want to make a record that's going to make the hair on the back of your neck stand up."

As for fellow competitor, David Archuleta, Cook has only warm words.

"He's just an amazing human being, so I was just honoured to share the stage with him."

Bringing hotel-style luxury home

Palette, mattress and bed linens are key elements

If we could help your home project the wonderful feeling you get when checking into a funky hotel, that'd be cool, huh? And if we could prove that boutique-hotel style isn't necessarily bank-busting, then that'd be even better, n'est pas? Cue this week's episode of The Home Show.

First things first? Luxury, as well as an obvious starting point — the bed. Forget flimsy mattresses that deny you deep, restorative slumber.

Our advice is to invest in a top quality model that'll cosset you to the max rather than make you feel like you're sleeping on the garden wall.

We recently created an über-sexy bedroom for a popular Canadian singer but, with her blessing, raided the affordable Sleep Country for an amazing deal. (Did you know that everyone has a different "sleep number" from one to 100 that's calculated on height, weight and so on? Perhaps the reason you're relentlessly tossing and turning is that you're on the wrong type of mattress for your body type. Visit www.sleepcountry.ca to find out.)

Hotel rooms are designed to stimulate your power-off buttons, and are generally decorated in neutral palettes that won't discommode as you try to unwind. Opt for shades like Whisper Bluff or Wayside Inn by Dulux, which are calming and low key.

Oversized headboards are also perfect get-the-look fodder, so shop around for one or buy a large section of thick foam, fix it to a piece of MDF that's the width of your bed and perhaps five feet high, then cover it all with touchy-feely fabric. Next up are linens — but we insist you bypass those paper-thin options and go for ones with a high-quality thread count (a measure which refers to the number of threads in each square inch of fabric). However, thread count isn't your only guide to quality. Fab-crafty. Make a cute bed throw to match your headboard by hemming a section of fabric, then tie the look together with cush-or break a hotel room so visit www.livinglighting.com. Boxy shapes with controllable light levels are cute and will allow you to change the mood as, ahem, required.

Finally, remember to titillate your nose. Scented candles are a luxury hotel staple, so dot them around your boudoir.

Turn on your flat screen telly (the one concealed in your wardrobe, of course) pour a glass of velvety red vino and settle down for the perfect night away — at home.

London's calling. In this episode, viewers get to gawk at a five-story residence located in a gothic tower — the only part of a London church that survived a fire in the 19th century. Also up for gawking are a home built in a Cape Town tree and an abode constructed of discarded curved wood. 3:30 PM on HGTV

Davis gets 'lame' deal

Kristin Davis was unhappy on the set of the Sex And The City: The Movie after finding out she wasn't allowed to keep her designer costumes, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The actress expected to collect her expensive collection of garments after the film wrapped but was disappointed when she was told the opulent items had to be returned to their fashion houses.

But Davis, who plays conservative Charlotte York in the eagerly anticipated movie, did get some fashionable treats — she was allowed to keep her character's collection of designer shoes.

She says, "I went up to get my clothes, and there were none left, because all mine were samples (and had to go back to the designers)."

"I got a really lame deal — totally coincidentally. But I got my shoes, thank God!"

Lohan turns down fur offer

Lindsay Lohan has turned down a nightclub owner's offer to bail her out of her latest legal troubles because she insists she is innocent, imdb.com reports. Model Masha Markova has filed papers at Manhattan's State Supreme Court claiming Lohan stole her $11,000 mink coat as she left a New York nightclub after a birthday party in January. The coat was later returned, but only after Lohan had been photographed wearing an identical fur on the same night. Nightclub boss John Englebert stepped in and offered to settle the case for Lohan, and buy her her own mink coat. But the actress insists she doesn't need his help.

Her representative says, "She already has one (fur coat)." Adding of the coat mystery, the rep adds, "If she took it, she took it by mistake. There are worse mistakes to make."

Shia can't kick dad out

Shia LaBeouf is having a hard time asking his dad to leave the garage of his Los Angeles home, femalefirst.co.uk reports. Vietnam veteran Jeffrey LaBeouf spends his summers living in a teepee in Montana and his winters staying with his movie star son. This year, however, the actor's father has yet to move on.

The Transformers star admits he can't bring himself to kick his dad out.

LaBeouf, 21, says, "We've got this little air mattress set up for him. It's very comfortable."

"But now it's not winter anymore and he's still there. But I can't go there and go, 'Hey dad. Listen it's time to go back.' I can't make him leave."

Lopez is on mommy duty

Jennifer Lopez is refusing to find a new nanny to look after her baby twins, because she wants to be a full-time mom, femalefirst.co.uk reports. The nanny Lopez and husband Marc Anthony hired to look after three-month-old twins Max and Emme left the job last month, and, instead of replacing her, Lopez is caring for the pair herself.

A friend tells Us Weekly, "She's beyond hands-on."

And both Lopez and Anthony plan to put family first and their careers second for at least the next 12 months: "They both told their managers that the next year would be all about family."

Meanwhile, Anthony will take his wife and twins with him when he tours Spain next month.

The digits 1 through 9 will appear exactly once in each row, each column, and each zone. (A zone is an outlined 3x3 grid within the larger puzzle grid. There are nine of these zones in the puzzle.) Do not enter a digit into a box if it already appears elsewhere in the same 3x3 zone, or in the same row across the puzzle, or column down the puzzle.
